Current drinking, standard fair for inexpensive Bdx, decent value.

Drank alongside some more expensive wines at dinner, from what I recollect this wine is defiantly improving from the last time. Well worth the 89 score could even push to 90 based on cost and quality. Finish seemed longer and fruit coming through nicely.

Dark color, light sediment. Black olive nose, palate is sour with some fruit lurking under it. Hot from the alcohol. Did soften with time. It will probably hold up for several more years. Not one I would seek out again though.

Surprisingly light colored semi-transparent blood color for its 14% alcohol and it's youth. Nose is attractive raspberry fresh fruit, a hint of lamb's blood and a backbone of fresh-sawn plank wood. Surprisingly little heat given the high alcohol. Palate is soft plummy Merlot-driven fruit with firm but well-balanced young tannins and a finish of dry fresh-sawn plank wood. Slightly heady on the finish but I'm really impressed how this holds it's high alcohol in check. Needs another year or two to show its full potential but it drinks beautifully now as a young, super QPR claret that is characterized by superb quality of fruit. Is only let down by its lack of length and resonance otherwise I'd put this in the 89-90 category. It really benefits from food...in this case 24-hour slow cooked prime rib. From Waitrose in the UK.
